

Creating Future Worlds

Mar 12, 2019 | Jane Perovich

Jorg Greuel's images are born from a notebook he always carries with him, filled with sketches and ideas gathered from "keeping my eyes open constantly" and looking for inspiration. Movies, TV, and art exhibits fuel his personal approach, playing with colors, size, abstraction and minimalism to interpret concepts of connection, networking, information technology and artificial intelligence. The distinct use of "vibrantly colored lines in dark environments to create futuristic elements both complex and archaic at the same time" brings a unique strength to Jorg's visualized work, and then - spoken like a true Futurist - he starts "fresh again."
